Rheinland-Pfalz is, among Bavaria and Baden-Wurttemberg, one the most famous German states and tourist regions.

It is also popular with most of the U.S. Americans living in Germany, who love to congregate at the region's many festivals held in countless villages.

Each town in Rheinland-Pfalz, whose English name is actually Rhineland-Palatine, celebrates its festivals throughout the year, especially during the wine season of September.

Rhein Valley, among the largest and most prominent castles in Rheinland-Pfalz, celebrates the Rhine Aflame (Rhein in Flammen), glorifies a famous dual where one of the castles is flamed up in bright orange and there are fireworks galore!

The Palatinate region has its own specialties, such as Saumagen, a bologna prepared with pork and potatoes, sliced and grilled. The people here love wine more than beer, and many of Germany's exported white wines come from this region.

Rhineland-Palatinate offers an array of exciting choices for hanging around in towns, rivers and countryside — Nordic Walking parks, guided cycle paths and a seemingly relentless choice of trails. You can tackle the River Lahn by canoe, visit the Glan Valley by railroute, enjoy a
